RYTHMA EKANAYAKE

Hello, I'm

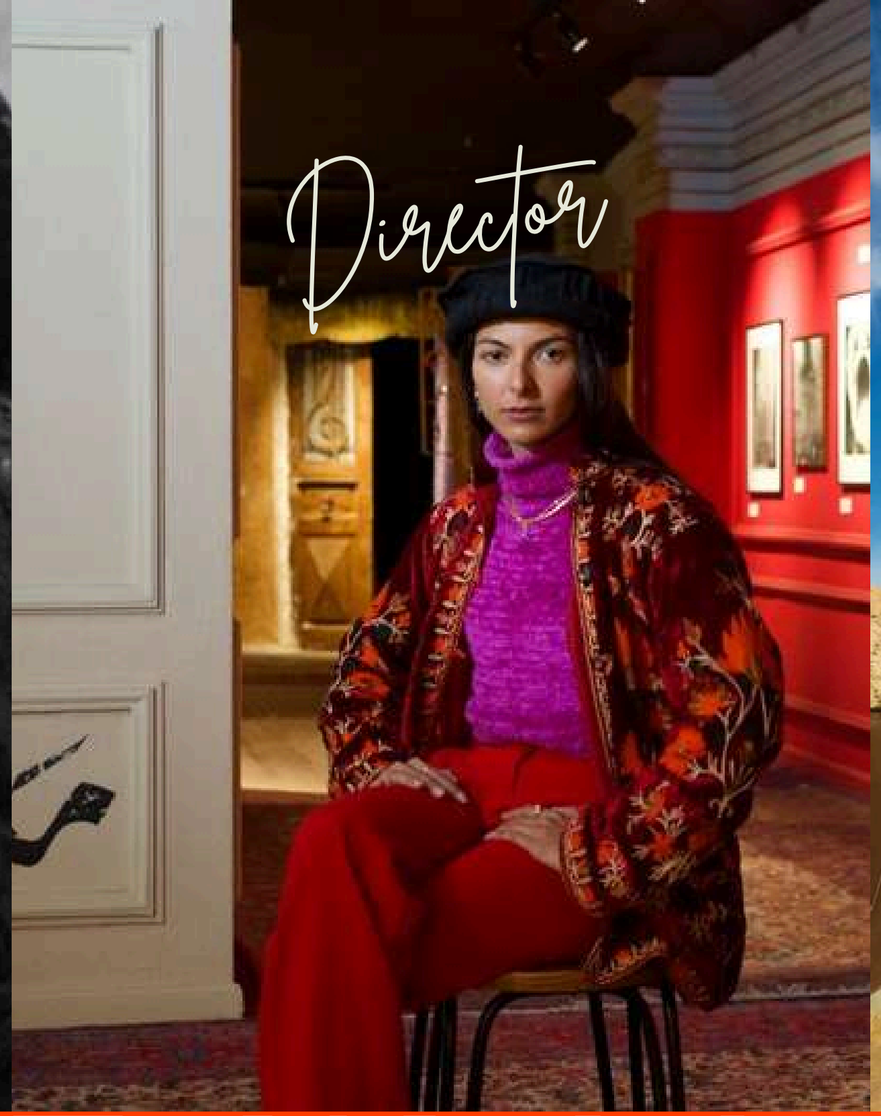
RYTHMA

ABOUT ME

I'm a writer, creative producer, and director working at the intersection of culture, identity, and storytelling across the MENA region and its diaspora.

With a background in digital media, a philosophy degree, and nearly a decade of producing stories that amplify underrepresented voices, I lead and produce projects that foreground the stories of women and communities that rarely get to be seen on their own terms.

Whether producing long-form documentaries or multi-platform content across social, editorial, branded, and experiential formats, my work is driven by cultural shifts, community-led storytelling, and a clear point of view.



WORK EXPERIENCE

DIRECTING

Everything Has Changed

An ongoing docu-series that travels from city to city to highlight the different ways in which our lives have changed drastically over the last decade, the realities we continue to carry with us and the new narratives we can learn to adopt. Conceptualized, interviewed, directed and scripted by me.

As a Creative Producer, I've worked closely with a network of over 500 creatives, entrepreneurs, athletes, and healers, shaping their stories into compelling digital content. My role covered the full development and production process — from research and storyboarding to interviewing, scripting, and producing stand-alone features for web and YouTube platforms.

WRITING

Storytelling

While my career has evolved past the written word, it will forever remain my first love. Through writing, not only was I able to tell important stories, but I was able to tap into connection and community.
